Appreciate Your Child's School Bus Driver

School bus drivers are often taken for granted. Yet these people touch the lives of our children every day and make an enormous contribution to the community.

According to the National Safety Council, the school bus is "172 times safer than your family automobile." National statistics show that 8.8 billion student trips are made annually. Some 440,000 buses transport over 24 million kids to and from school daily.

Not only are school buses safer on the road, the school bus driver is required to receive more training than any other driver. The school bus driver must receive training in student management and first aid. Yet, school bus drivers are rarely given the credit they deserve. It's time we show our appreciation.

If you know of a school bus driver who deserves special attention, call the school to show your appreciation for a job well done.

For more information on national statistics, visit: Key National Statistics at www.schoolbusinfo.org/keystats.htm.
